Mona Baptiste

Over the next few years, she appeared in the British music magazine for events such as signing with to sing with the Cabinettes, appearing on the television show Coloured Follies, and appearing on the British radio variety show in 1949. See: Carleton, May See: Carleton, S.

HMS Tiger (C20)

Their benefit would be more as platforms to extend the range and endurance of the Harriers and as a refuelling stop on the way back to the carriers, rather than as somewhere to operate offensive missions from, or as somewhere to place a pair of Sea Harriers as an extended-range ahead of the two carriers and reducing their own exposure to air strikes , but the need to take off vertically rather than the use of a ski-jump severely reduced the Harriers' endurance and weapons carrying capability, and in late May 1982 after the loss of the and the Argentinian cruiser the refits were stopped. These vessels had a low construction priority due to more pressing requirements for other ship types during World War II, particularly anti-submarine craft.

In 1951 the Government decided to complete the ship, and two others, to an altered design with all-new armament as opposed to new construction of cruisers; with the revised design, HMS Tiger, became the of this cruiser class. On 10 August 1966 one of the guns accidentally fired a practice shell into Devonport Dockyard during material tests of the equipment.

HMS Tiger (C20)

Each 6 inch and 3 inch mounting had its own Medium Range System MRS 3 radar. Tiger was given much taller funnels with squared off caps, which was such an improvement that the was given similar funnels in 1977.

HMS Tiger (C20)

Her large crew made her an expensive ship to operate and maintain. At the end of 1959 she deployed to the Mediterranean for a year as the of the. The Tiger refit took over five years and cost over £13 million.
