The Educational Tour Marm: Oscar Solomon Straus: Statesman and Humanitarian

When a bitter labor strike paralyzed the coal industry in 1902, Straus was made a vice president of the Arbitration Committee of Thirty-six.

Oscar S. Straus, Statesman and Philanthropist, Dies

After considerable delay the murderer was tried, but because of his high standing in the community he was acquitted, doubtless on the plea of self-defense, and he got off scot-free. Our mothers learned to give us an acceptable substitute by cutting sweet potatoes into little cubes, drying them in the sun, then roasting and grinding them, together with grains of wheat, like the ordinary bean. With the proceeds he bought a beautiful bay pony, which he and I prized more than any possession we have ever had, before or since.
