UK oil and gas sector confidence plunges to record lows

While the Oil and Gas Authority OGA offered 113 licence areas over 259 blocks or part-blocks to 65 companies in early September, it is not certain that operations will take advantage of this opportunity because of current market instability.

The Electrification Of UK Offshore Oil & Gas

Transfer to other industries Marine technology, skills and expertise pioneered in oil and gas are important in the design, installation and maintenance of offshore and hence have found roles in the continuing evolution of. Onshore operators have a statutory obligation to also supply well data to the British Geological Survey BGS. The exploration for and extraction of oil and gas from the UKCS accounted for around 350,000 of these; this comprised 34,000 directly employed by oil and gas companies and their major contractors, plus 230,000 within the wider supply chain.

Rhum gasfield

On completion of the Petrofac STA, Anjad Bseisu will step down from his role as Chief Executive of the Energy Developments business unit and as a Director of Petrofac and will become Chief Executive Officer of EnQuest.

Exploration drilling activity expected to recover in 2021, says Westwood Global

The Norwegian continental shelf NCS may serve as a great example: There are currently eight oil and gas fields partly or fully electrified in the country, and another eight fields with sanctioned electrification projects.
