These policies, laws, and regulations are usually across multiple sectors in addition to agriculture, including banking, trade, and land policies.

Economic Development

We believe that the use of several complementary datasets allows us to shed new light on some key issues related to delivery and financing of infrastructure investment. They can include typical public goods such as rural advisory services or training as well as investments in commodities or geographies that are important to transformation but unlikely to garner private investment.

Where We Work

Our experience suggests that they are the biggest controllable factors leading to successful conclusions.

Public investment in developing countries: A blessing or a curse?

Many tools and processes exist to achieve common understanding, but getting there requires commitment from leaders across different sectors. This task can be very difficult in municipal and state governments, where departments and agencies have different purposes and different measures of performance.
