Early by , Sieger's assistant or tutor was a artist who fled his country in the Thirty Years War, settling mostly in England he was besieged at in the , and then followed his Royalist patron into a new exile in Antwerp, where he worked with a number of the large publishers there. His prints show from early on the macabre world that appears only in hints in the paintings until the last years.

How to Start A Collection of Old Master Prints

The earliest printed images in Europe were created in the 14th century, by which time China was already looking back at a 1,000-year-old printmaking tradition. Another Holbein series, of ninety-one Old Testament scenes, in a much simpler style, was the most popular of attempts by several artists to create Protestant religious imagery.
