The result is that cars that meet emissions standards in the laboratory emit nitrogen oxides at levels up to 40 times the standard during normal operation. Appendix C details the hearings, requests for documents, studies, fact-finding missions and other activities undertaken by the committee to collect the evidence necessary for the fulfilment of its inquiry mandate. The first research programme to measure NO x emissions of light-duty vehicles with PEMS started in 2007, and before this date PEMS were designed for tests of heavy-duty vehicles only.

The Committee will next meet on Friday 12th February at 2:00pm when it will consider its work programme in private. Since committees of inquiry are set up with the task of investigating alleged contraventions or maladministration in the implementation of Union law, the main targets of investigation are Union and Member States institutions in charge of that law. No mandatory initiatives to recall or retrofit non-conform vehicles were taken, and no type-approvals were withdrawn.

On 26 January 2017, the Commission published a Notice on Guidance on the evaluation of Auxiliary Emission Strategies and the presence of Defeat Devices. A complete evaluation of the RDE tests will only be possible once all four packages have been adopted. However, the committee also encountered difficulties in inviting guests to attend hearings, because it lacked subpoena power.
