The sandals of the Prophet are among the most popular relics in Islam, and they were particularly venerated during the Middle Ages due to the blessings they are believed to bestow. In a section of his treatise entitled Qāb Qawsayn, he insists on the importance of the veneration of the tomb of the Prophet and the mental visualization of the latter: One must persistently keep in mind its visible shape, as it was previously described, by observing the rules of decency and by showing veneration, deference and reverent fear.
