His staff insisted that he wear it to dinner, which caused scores of soldiers to rush to see him in uncharacteristic garb. He seems to have been at all times eager for self-improvement. His occupations were agriculture, and the preparation of lumber and flour, diversified with the hardy sports of a forest country.

Ad Pisones.

His habits of uncomplaining endurance, and his modest reluctance to every display savoring of egotism, concealed the larger part of these sufferings.

Was it not due to that noble constitution of his nature, that reverence for the true and the right, that manly courage which the Creator impressed upon it, for his own ulterior ends, coupled with the purifying force of a Christian mother's teachings and prayers? Henry Heth graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1847, and went into service in the Mexican war, and was present at Matamoras and Galaxara. This can be a naive oversimplification, however.
