Police Power of the State

Certain forms of nonverbal communication like picketing are considered symbolic speech and are protected under the 1st Amendment. These cases demonstrate that, for more than thirty years, this Court has been mindful of the narrow purpose of Civil Rights Law § 50-a when considering whether personnel records must be disclosed under FOIL. The officers had been the subject of news reports concerning an incident where they had thrown eggs at a civilian's vehicle id.

Indeed, it is how the mandates of FOIL are effectuated everyday by agencies and the judiciary when called upon to resolve a disputed request for government records. Discussion The USA PATRIOT Act reauthorized by Congress in 2006 with a few changes , the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 2008, and actions carried out by the National Security Agency and George W. The Court tried to clarify its doctrine by spelling out what could be classified as obscene and thus outside 1st Amendment protection in the 1973 case of Miller v.

Protecting Civil Liberties During a Public Health Crisis

NCLA urges Americans to recognize the administrative threat and join our civil liberties movement against it. Ultimately, it is the courts that decide what constitutional guarantees mean in practice: Although the federal courts are the branch of government least subject to majority rule, the courts enhance democracy by protecting liberty and equality from the excesses of majority rule.

On the other hand, if the Deputy Commissioner closed the hearing for discussion of an officer's alcoholism and treatment, the NYPD should redact that information from any documents sought in a FOIL request. The statute gives counties three options for creating a public defense system: establish county public defender offices, contract with a private legal aid society, or use a panel of private assigned counsel.

Long

Reynolds was a Mormon man who claimed that he had a religious duty to commit polygamy, even though this was outlawed by a federal statute. That scheme would transform Civil Rights Law § 50-a into an optional mechanism applicable only when and if the agency chooses to invoke it. The parties' proposal would, instead, enable an agency to circumvent the host of statutory protections belonging to covered officers by simply applying redactions that the agency, in its sole discretion, deems adequate.
