Poems n Odes by John Keats and an Analysis of His Poetry

Stirring Shades and Baffled Beams: The Ode on Indolence 2. In reading this now, along with you, I think I agree with Daedalus Lex and a part of you too I see that this is a nearness, a sense of intense almost that expresses that sense.

Keats

How, then, can we bridge this gap? This book was just as good and it focused on some of my very favorite poems. The use of the ABAB structure in the beginning lines of each stanza represents a clear example of structure found in classical literature, and the remaining six lines appear to break free of the traditional poetic styles of Greek and Roman odes. To what green alter, O mysterious priest, Lead'st thou that heifer lowing at the skies, And all her silken flanks with garlands drest? So, we contemplate the One, the entire process which unfolded in these poems with wonder and amazement, not only at the profundity of it, but the passion which gripped Keats as he poured forth this beauty, all in a few weeks in that Spring of 1819, at age 24.

Keats' Poems and Letters Summary

Another paradox arises when the narrator describes immortals on the side of an urn meant to carry the ashes of the dead. Although the poet is gazing round the surface of the urn in each stanza, the poem cannot readily be consumed as a series of 'idylls'. And I am sure that he would have repudiated any explanation of the line which called it a pseudo-statement.

Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2001. It is an unflawed centre of refuge in a world of flux.
