We know you can do it! For many American professionals, receiving acknowledgment and credit for good work oftentimes supersedes any form of monetary reward or elevation in status. In fact, being a great leader is more an art than it is a science, and anyone can become a better, more effective, and more successful leader—you just need time, practice and perseverance. The most successful leaders are prepared to work alongside their team during times of crisis and take responsibility for any blowback that occurs along the way.
