A Tale of Two Cities Quotes

Humabon was a rival of one of the chiefs on Mactan Island, Lapu-Lapu. His first thought made him feel sick and numb. The women are unlike any the men have ever encountered: strong, self-confident, clearly intelligent, and obviously unafraid of men.

Jane Austen's Art and her Literary Reputation

It already won awards for the original publication which is in French. Heartbreaking because so much of that relationship has been lost; and not just the bees, of which we hear so many tales of dwindling numbers, suddenly dead or destroyed hives, but our personal connections to nature, lost and abandoned in the concrete jungles and technological advancements.

Men are so Ardent by Gerald Kersh

It does not tell us who the creator was, only that he or she had certain abilities and talents.

A Tale of Two Cities Quotes

Three hundred yards from his hiding place he stopped where a huge dead tree leaned precariously on a smaller, living one. Such fragmentary historiography enables one to recover the lost potentials of the past in the hope that they may find actualization in the present. He had buried alive 460 scholars only, but we have buried alive 46,000 scholars.

Topical Bible: Ardent

These two faculties are closely connected, the former mitigating the irreversibility of action by absolving the actor from the unintended consequences of his or her deeds, the latter moderating the uncertainty of its outcome by binding actors to certain courses of action and thereby setting some limit to the unpredictability of the future.
