Literary Translation at UEA: April 2013

It involves ordinary, everyday language, it is not subject-specific, and it does not require the understanding of specialized terminologies.

LITERARY TRANSLATION on JSTOR

After spending two semesters working on translations, I slowly realised that the perfect translation was impossible.

Creative Constraints: Translation and Authorship

This supposes that the aim of art is to teach, which it is not, or that to create anything which is simply a good-in-itself is a waste of time. Margaret Sayers ~ Richard Powers ~ Gabriel García Márquez ~ John Banville ~ Martha Cooley ~ Javier Marías trans.
