The Top Ten Scientific Problems with Biological and Chemical Evolution

Wrangham: Of the various transitions that occurred during human evolution, the transition from Australopithecus to Homo was undoubtedly one of the most critical in its magnitude and consequences. Even though the gaps in the fossil record are found between each basic animal type, there are two huge gaps in particular that should be emphasized.

What Are the Top Ten Problems with Darwinian Evolution?

About 40 years later, anthropologist Jean-Jacques Hublin and his associates excavated a half-dozen layers of soil beneath the land where the skull and arm bones were originally discovered. The basic problem is that one gene gives one version of the tree of life, while another gene gives a highly different, and conflicting, version of the tree.

More Big Problems with Human Evolution

Problem 7: Convergent Evolution Challenges Darwinism and Destroys the Logic Behind Common Ancestry In Problem 6, we saw that the main assumption underlying all phylogenetic trees is that biological similarity is the result of inheritance from a common ancestor. This problem is one of the big ones in science. Answer Christians and non-Christians alike often question whether the theory of evolution is accurate.

The Top Ten Scientific Problems with Biological and Chemical Evolution

Geochemists now believe that the atmosphere of the early Earth did not contain appreciable amounts of these components.
