In the 19th century, the upper parts of the walls were rebuilt with larger dormer windows. The lords Maxwell never lived at Mearns, preferring their barony and other lands of Caerlaverock in the south-west of Scotland. The date of the building of the castle can be easily deduced by a double armorial stone over the entrance to Sir John Maxwell of Pollok and his wife Margaret Cunningham dated 1585.

King James IV was a guest of the Maxwells at the castle in 1495 and is recorded as having bought fish there. Maxwell Castles in Dumfries and Galloway Castles and Towerhouses owned by the Maxwell family in Dumfries and Galloway. It was significant that the King should come to lay the siege and more significant that he should bring the cream of the English nobility and chivalry to do it.

Having little time to devote to the distant barony of Pollok, he turned that responsibility over to his second son, John, who became the first Baron of Pollok. Haggs Castle was used as a jointure house ie; it was granted to a wife for the period in which she survived after the death of her husband but it became ruinous after 1752 when Sir John Maxwell, 3rd Baronet d 1752 completed the building of a new residence, Pollok House.
