Its overall message was to highlight the place of history in the formation and safeguarding of Scottish national identity, in spite of the Union of 1707, and to evangelise about the importance of the county of Ayrshire in the bigger picture of this national historical narrative.

Up The Pageant (TV Episode 1995)

Anderson's skill paid off: the Pageant of Ayrshire was a huge success. There were in addition the following named characters: Bartulph Chamberlain of Scotland , Turgot Prior of Durham and Fothad Bishop of St Andrews.

Smile (1975 film)

The three historical scenes included the coming of Christianity featuring St Ninian, the foundation of the Abbey facilitated by William I, and lastly, the execution in London of William Wallace—although, judging from the available evidence, public sensibilities were considered and the actual hanging, drawing and quartering of this Scottish freedom fighter does not seem to have been portrayed.
