The Troutdale area had attracted an especially large number of emigrants from Germany. Bailey noted that Indian infiltrators soon surrounded his Company B, 21st Infantry, forcing the soldiers to establish an all-around defense. Launching the Fight for the Black Hills Concerned about launching a war against the Lakota without provocation, the government instructed American Indian agents in the region to notify the various non-treaty bands to return to the reservation by January 31, 1876, or face potential military action.

History of Nezperce

Even as the groups gathered up their belongings and left their homelands in compliance with Howard's ultimatum, more Nez Perce began to see violence rather than talking as the solution to their problems.
