Chapter XLIV

He who has the usus of a house, has nothing more than the right of inhabiting it himself; for he cannot transfer this right to another; and it is not without considerable doubt that it has been thought allowable that he should receive a guest in the house, but he may live in it with his wife and children, and freedmen, and other free persons who may be attached to his service no less than his slaves are. .

Four types of corporation were distinguished: 1.

Roman law

We see, indeed, that all the other animals besides men are considered as having knowledge of this law.

Justinian I

When any one, under the age of puberty, is arrogated by the imperial rescript, the arrogatio is only allowed when inquiry has been made into the circumstances of the case.

Reform and Change in the Roman Empire

Justice was not always to be found on the side of right. Nor can the terms of the stipulation be considered unjust, if the adoptive father desired to obtain some advantage, on account of which his son would have more esteem for him after his emancipation. Among the Romans, a gens or lineage was united by a common name and domestic rites; the various cognomens or surnames of Scipio or Marcellus distinguished from each other the subordinate branches or families of the Cornelian or Claudian race; the default of the agnats of the same surname was supplied by the larger denomination of gentiles; and the vigilance of the laws maintained, in the same name, the perpetual descent of religion and property.

The Institutes of Justinian, by Justinian

They constantly extorted new privileges, until they were sufficiently powerful to be courted by demagogues. Consequently, though the house should be destroyed, he cannot claim the materials by real action. Thus in point of fact the senate did not introduce a usufruct of such things, for that was beyond its power, but established a right analogous to usufruct by requiring security.

Chapter XLIV

If a process is commenced against a tutor or curator, as suspected, and he dies while it is going on, the process is at an end.
