The Greater East Asia Co

Included in this planning was Thailand, Japan's sole Asian ally, which was virtually the only nation in East Asia other than Japan that had managed to avoid colonization. Industry: Our guidance of Thailand's industry will be in conformity with local industrial planning for the Greater East Asia Co-Prosperity Sphere; our main objective is to bring about the full manifestation of the special characteristics of Thailand's industry.

Thailand, Japanese Pan

Furthermore, as circumstances permit, we will bring about the reorganization of Thailand's economic system as a member of the Greater East Asia economic bloc. The important thing to remember, however, is that this high-level economic policy-making for Japan's occupied areas and its imperial formalization as national policy was not a wartime contingency. Both regimes created new central banks that ultimately had no time to make any impact.

Furthermore, we will give consideration to the Thai desire for establishing an autonomous domestic Thai economy, and we will respect as much as possible the proposals and suggestions of the Thai people. That said, there were important legacies in both countries. Moreover, we will give consideration to bringing about the participation of Thai companies within an appropriate local framework.

Japan's Sudden and Brutal Occupation of Southeast Asia

Regarding the development of natural resources, we will: 1 secure needed commodities for which the Greater East Asia Co-Prosperity Sphere is to a comparatively high degree dependent on Thailand 2 give priority to developing commodities in which the Greater East Asia Co-Prosperity Sphere is deficient and devise ways to bring about increased production of the following commodities: a agricultural resources: castor beans, cotton, hemp b forestry resources: pine resin, lacquer, chaulmoogra trees, sticklac, dammar, mangrove bark c livestock resources: cow hides, water buffalo hides, deer hides d mining resources: tungsten ore, titanium ore b. Owing to this, I believed I had an opportunity to make an intervention into historical studies of World War II. The co-prosperity sphere was code for Japanese Empire Racialist thinking and pragmatic, but headlong exploitation of resources meant that Japan treated Southeast Asia as a disposable commodity.
