Industrial relations

More overseas born full-time workers who are born in non-English speaking countries are members of trade unions than those born in English speaking countries.

Australia's national workplace relations system

Chief among these was the possibility of a more decentralised system which provided greater opportunities for employers and workers to negotiate directly over wages at the enterprise and workplace level. The predicament of Australian workers in coping with a changing employment environment will drive a search for organisational structures capable of influencing outcomes.

Industrial Relations Reform and Labour Market Outcomes: A Comparison of Australia, New Zealand and the United Kingdom

The emphasis on that issue contrasts markedly with the focus of the test for redundancy elaborated by the High Court in Ancor v Construction, Forestry, Mining and Energy Union. The timing of that proclamation is dependent upon the finalisation of associated Regulations.

The Fair Work system

Industrial relations IR is an all-encompassing term for the relationships existing between employers, workers and their representatives.

Commission to have regard to result of ballot 139. The trend in industrial disputation in all three countries over the course of the 1980s and 1990s has also been quite similar.

Federal Employment & Industrial Relations Law (most workers in Australia)

The power of the Commission: a to include a bans clause in an award; or b to omit or vary a bans clause; is exercisable only by a Presidential Member or a Full Bench. The NSW reforms, for example, were largely replaced by legislation introduced by the newly elected Labor Government in 1996. Apart from the decentralisation of bargaining associated with the ECA, the number of unions has fallen as some unions went out of existence while others merged.

Scott Morrison's Industrial Relations Laws Are a Kick in the Teeth for Australian Workers

If that were the wording, the provision might be seen as an analogous extension of an existing prohibition against detriment by an employer to an employee for the reason that the employee is entitled to the benefit of an industrial instrument. Had it done so, the prohibition might be characterised as a rebalancing of the scales in favour of employers wanting to outsource work. Of at least equal importance has been the effectively symbiotic relationship between collective representative organisations and the industrial arbitration systems.
