Austin Sarat is William Nelson Cromwell Professor of Jurisprudence and Political Science, Amherst College. For example, damages for pain and suffering, , and. Â The defendant argued that no award should be made for pain and suffering given that pain and suffering was inevitable in any event.

Pain, Death, and the Law

Even the standard jury instruction does not provide the jurors with guidance in determining a figure. Presenting multiple stories from different witnesses demonstrating the extent of your pain and suffering damages and including a monetary range for each will allow the jury a viable opportunity to compensate you for that loss. These two terms can be tricky because they are almost counter-intuitive.
