But amongst the best painted are those at the doors of the marchands de vins et de comestibles, where we see frequently bunches of fruit, game, flowers, glasses, hams, fowls, fish, all cleverly grouped together, and painted in a dashing style. . We can picture to ourselves the unfortunate plumed, feathered, silken gallant of the period walking, in his low shoes and silk stockings, through the ill-paved dirty streets, on a stormy November day, when the honours were equally divided between fog, sleet, snow, and rain, and no umbrellas, be it remembered, with flower-pots blown from the penthouses, spouts sending down shower-baths from almost every house, and the streaming signs swinging overhead on their rusty, creaking hinges.

The Object in 20th

The spectator-buyer can then, without any mystery, enter the space of production of the work, made by an artist-craftsman working at the very point of sale. On the next morning our bath was again in working order, but a terrific storm had set in, so that we could not use it. A Monkey, a Magpie, and Wife; Is the true Emblem of Strife.
