Some print the scripts as written and others as finally broadcast. Douglas Smith was our regular BBC announcer whose establishment manner developed such a large following among the audience that the writers were forced to provide him with his own funny lines, all delivered with great seriousness - and perfect timing. Both programmes starred Kenneth Horne, Kenneth Williams, Hugh Paddick, Betty Marsden and Bill Pertwee, with announcer Douglas Smith.

Summary Each week the show would feature sketches parodying a different subject, several catchphrases and many memorable characters, such as rumbling Sid Rumpole and not forgetting Julian and Sandy. Unlike the 2004 production, it had a six-strong cast, augmented by a group of vocalists and musicians in the roles of the Hornblowers and the Fraser Hayes Four. In 1969 Kenneth Horne collapsed and died on stage while presenting a television awards programme.

Charles: I don't have the words for it. Barry Took wrote that they were his own favourite Round the Horne characters. When the loyal toast was drunk, she leapt out, wearing pink combs and waving a Union Jack — either that or the other way round, I don't remember.

The quotations are arranged thematically and cover all aspects of life: from the world we inhabit to the things we eat, smoke and drink; from the way we move around to what and how we learn - oh, and the pointlessness of football. Since the publication of edited extracts from his diaries, much controversy has surrounded Williams's personal and professional lives. It featured as Horne, as Williams, Nigel Harrison as Paddick, Kate Brown as Marsden and Charles Armstrong as Smith.
