Summary and reviews of Far North by Marcel Theroux

Global warming has decimated civilization, and narrator Makepeace Hatfield is the sole survivor of her Siberian settlement. The extent as to exactly what's going on is never fully explained, which is a route Kapadia wisely decides to go down so as to not veer too far away from what the film is essentially about: this rural set drama with essence of romance; horrifically looking at the results of conflict within a close-knit bond.
