Social Policy for Social Work

After the passage of the Determination of Needs Act, the Labour Movement continued to press for improvements, particularly for the extension of the principles of the new legislation to cover Public Assistance and other services as well at that time, it only covered the Assistance Board. We choose this time, because it is a time, of all others, when Want is keenly felt, and when Abundance rejoices. Britain was 'strikebound', with public servants staging mass walk outs, leaving food and fuel supplies undelivered, rubbish uncollected and - most notoriously - bodies unburied.
