Man Ray, Max Ernst, Dorothea Tanning Mathematics in Surrealism. In 1934, Man Ray, already an established leader of the Dada and Surrealist movements, visited the Institut Henri Poincaré in Paris to see a collection of three-dimensional mathematical models, made in the late 19th and early 20th centuries to illustrate geometrical properties for the investigation and teaching of algebraic equations. But, it was some else's vision so I had to tap into that and try to do my best.
