CuidarNos: Art and Social Work to Address Trauma Among Gender

Photo Credit: Jessica-Jean de la Vega, 2021. With an exacting combination of printmaking, photography, and 3D topographical mapping, the laser etchings of personal photographs are spread across three-dimensional representations of the folds in the brain, drawing attention to the capacity of experimentation in both medicine and the humanities.

To retrieve an emotive memory, utilizing a visualization exercise, participants were invited to breathe deeply and take a journey through their individual memories of the day Hurricane María hit Puerto Rico. These objects were commonly used by many when there was no electricity, access to running water, or access to fresh food. In this phase of the Encuentro, participants being able to suspend themselves in the air one by one while being supported by the shoulders of their co-participants introduced the topic of relying on the power of coming together, despite differences and even tensions among each other.

I wanted it to be transformation and beauty and hope, because that was mirroring my own journey. Its presence for almost 30 years in addressing intimate partner violence and sexual assault through capacity building, community outreach, and involvement in developing and strengthening social policies based on social justice and human rights has been the foundation of trust for organizations in various communities.

These projects and collaborations include mural making, ancestral healing workshops, a Countywide public literary art project and more to celebrate the remarkable resources and communities in LA County and use arts-based strategies for healing and wellbeing. The Healing Flow: Artistic Expression in Therapy is a theoretical and experiential account of the author's work with survivors of childhood trauma and post traumatic stress. Each work in the series uses the power of art toward collective wellbeing, health and connectedness.

Preview in Google Books Farrelly-Hansen, Mimi, Ed. Rather than express it verbally, choosing colors to reflect the feelings and memories of that moment, it was magical. When going through the process of CuidarNos, it takes me back to the postulate that I go first, and if I am living and integrating self-care, then I am the living example before other people, as an artist and as an educator community.
