Does it involve two or more activities excluding administration that bear a relationship to each other and which either in terms of support or necessity must be carried out in a coordinated manner? Orshansky started her food costs to-total expenditures procedure by considering a hypothetical average middle income family, spending one-third of its income on food, which was faced with a need to cut back on its expenditures. As farmers focused on producing undifferentiated raw commodities, food system profit and opportunities were shifted to the companies that process, package, and market food. The summary should include a description of the process used to identify the needs and establish priorities, including efforts to encourage meaningful citizen participation.
