Latin Funerary Inscriptions

This volume has the greatest number of inscriptions; volume 6, part 8, fascicle 3 was just recently published 2000. Greek epigraphy has unfolded in the hands of a different team, with different. Not only were public announcements of all sorts, such as we should make known by or , thus placed before the public, but all kinds of records and enactments — and political decrees; regulations for all matters, civil and religious; accounts and contracts, public and private; treaties between states; records of public and private benefactions and dedications, and all matters of administration; honours to the living and to the memory of the dead.

Such prohibitions are frequent, and often relate to the need of ceremonial purity in all worshippers entering a sacred precinct.

Inscription

A notable instance is the of at the which has been completely reconstructed on paper by architects from the building specification.

All Regions

The history is in its largest sense, involving men and women in many of their affairs, such as life and death, government, law, religious worship — all as illustrated above.
