MacDonagh, Thomas 1878

Three of these translations are given in this collection, for into them, I believe, he put much of his own personality. In the days of our doom and our dread Ye were cruel and callous, Grim Death with our fighters ye fed Through the jaws of the gallows; But a blasting and blight was the fee For which ye had bartered them, And we smite with the sword that from ye We had gained when ye martyred them! All was alive with light — But on us the perpetual night Fell down and slew the day. We expect that you will understand our compulsion in these books.

Pearse {Translated from the Irish by Thomas MacDonagh 31 THE DIRGE OF OLIVER GRACE {From the Irish of Seaghdn Mac Walter Walsh A dusky mist is on every hill, A mist that hath never come before; There is a mournful silence in the noon- tide Broken by the heavy voice of sorrow. The British started Court Martial trials for the leaders of the uprising immediately. The Dirge of Oliver Grace.

Context: Joseph Mary Plunkett Papers,

I have put no word, no speech, into the mouths of my little boys which xxii INTRODUCTION the real little boys of the parish I have in mind — boys whom I know as well as I know my pupils at Sgoil Eanna — would not use in the same circumstances. Thomas MacDonagh 17 O STAR OF DEATH Mortalem Vitam Mors cum Immortalis Ademit The earth in its darkness spinning Is a sign from the gate of horn Of the dream that a life's beginning Is in its end reborn — Dark symbol of true dreaming. The truth is beyond thy seeming As the wide of infinitude Is beyond the air of the earth! Croagh Patrick is the place of prayers, And Tara the assembling place: But each sweet wind of Ireland bears The trump of battle on its race.
