Violation of Human Rights

It was essential for States, United Nations agencies and mechanisms, and, of course, indigenous people themselves, to be actively involved in efforts to identify ways to ensure those peoples could exercise all their rights, especially in the political and social spheres of the countries in which they lived. Some agreements contained provisions to deal with mining companies; others allowed for aboriginal input into development. The Karen are seeking a moratorium on the expansion of PAs, along with recognition of existing local land management and conservation practices.

Violation of Human Rights

Notes with concern that human rights risks associated with mining, oil and gas extraction fall disproportionately on indigenous peoples; calls on developing countries to carry out mandatory human rights impact assessments prior to all new activities in these sectors and to disclose their findings; stresses the need to ensure that the legislation governing the granting of concessions includes provisions on FPIC; recommends broadening the standards of the Extractive Industry Transparency Initiative EITI to include protection of the human rights of local and indigenous communities; 22. Calls on all states to ensure that indigenous women and girls enjoy full protection and guarantees against all forms of violence, including sexual and gender-based violence, gender-based killings, early and forced marriages, female genital mutilation and other harmful practices; 12.

Human Rights

Calls therefore on the Commission, in the context of its foreign policy, to work together with civil society and human rights organisations to ensure that the human rights of indigenous peoples in reception centres are upheld, particularly in respect of vulnerable women and girls; 6. Collaborative efforts were needed to achieve better results. Emerging issues Indigenous human rights defenders Indigenous human rights defenders are increasingly targeted as terrorists for promoting and protecting decades-old guaranteed rights.

Colombia: The IACHR must listen to the voices of victims of human rights violations

If approved, that mechanism should be immediately dispatched to areas where indigenous populations were under pressure. When the Biligiri

Rangaswamy Temple Wildlife Sanctuary BRT was declared in 1974, the Soliga indigenous communities living inside the sanctuary were forcibly relocated and banned from traditional practices. Calls on the Commission and the EEAS to design and implement programmes that address the specific and collective rights of indigenous peoples, including their right to non-discrimination and land-related rights; 19.

Violations of Indigenous Peoples' and local communities' rights and steps towards reform in 27 countries

The Corporate Liability and Sustainable Peace Lab Laboratorio de Responsabilidad Corporativa y Paz Sostenible, CLASP published a statement in solidarity with Silva and urged the Colombian government to protect her and members of ADISPA, as well as address rising violence against social leaders in the country. Today, people in Guam are citizens by birth and can vote for party delegates in presidential primaries, but they cannot cast ballots for president.

UN prods U.S. over military buildup, human rights violations in Guam

Points out that we in the EU still have much to learn about sustainable use, for example of forests, from indigenous peoples, who, moreover, scarcely contribute to climate change because of their way of life, but are particularly affected by it, because of drought or desertification, for example, an impact that affects women in particular; 34. However, over the course of several years, the colonists learned how to survive in their new environment with the help of their Native American neighbors.
