Congressional Research Service and Library of Congress. The average annual timber industry harvest of national forest timber in the 1970's was 11. So, when they had the opportunity to meet with the Secretary of Agriculture and his new assistant secretary, the industry implored them to accelerate the roadless area process.

Guide to House Records: Chapter 10

National forest managers were having trouble determining where they could plan and carry out timber sales in roadless areas and where such management would be opposed by wilderness advocates who filed lawsuits or by Congressmen who proposed wilderness. The Brooks series 1959—1992 contains files designated as such by Brooks' office staff. C Area, September 6, 1961 Memo by Brooks re: Work with Efficiency Subcommittee, July 1958 College Academic Facilities Act, H.
