The Surreal Life of Gretchen Whitmer

Young identifies two broad groups of such practico-inert objects and realities. Through its analysis of different 'generic' subsections, whether the literary journal, the fashion magazine, the domestic press or more explicitly politicised outputs, Figurations of the Feminine challenges the critical commonplaces which have surrounded the women's press since its genesis, both in France and elsewhere. In Conversational Rhetoric: The Rise and Fall of a Women's Tradition, 1600-1900, Jane Donawerth traces the historical development of rhetorical theory by women for women and argues that women constructed a theory of rhetoric based on conversation, not public speaking, as a model for all discourse.

It Happened Here: A History of Slavery in California

If gender were separable from, for example, race and class in this manner, all women would experience womanhood in the same way. Mikkola 2006 argues that this isn't so.

The Surreal Life of Gretchen Whitmer

Linda Alcoff holds that feminism faces an identity crisis: the category of women is feminism's starting point, but various critiques about gender have fragmented the category and it is not clear how feminists should understand what it is to be a woman 2006, chapter 5.
