Shrimp Feeding Management Program

A rapid reduction in pressure when the mixture exits the die results in vaporisation of some moisture in the mixture so that the pellets expand, reducing their density. So it is generally desirable to use feeds that have a high level of digestibility.

Principles of fish nutrition

Collect about 100 seeds and send it to a shrimp health laboratory for disease testing. The feed was used during a production cycle at 174 farms and reported FCR values ranged from 1:1 to 2. The recommended feeding program is established program pursuant to decision making that is obtained through observation of the condition and needs of the shrimp and the dynamic nature carefully follow a progress in e field.

Shrimp Feeding Management Program

This may be present in thin or thick black layer form depending on the farming history of the farm. For maintaining the specific qualities of organic status, this management shall be practiced all over the production chain.

Marine Shrimp Biofloc Systems: Basic Management Practices

The quantitative dietary requirements for some fish species have been established Lall, 2002.

Marine Shrimp Culture: Principles and Practices

Fatty acids of the linoleic acid n-3 family are generally more essential to fish than those of the linoleic acid n-6 family. Less quantity of rainfall and high evaporation rate contributed to high salinity in shrimp pond.
