Survey finds prospective students put the emphasis on welcome and teaching quality

Introduction Internationalization of educational institutions in developed countries has not only provided opportunities for students from developing and underdeveloped countries to live, learn and groom in developed societies but has also helped a major contribution to the economies of the developed countries. However, from my own life experiences, I just think it's strange to spend several years abroad and yet not have any friends from countries other than one's home country! Safety concerns for international students are often brought up in the media. Personal dynamic can be described as individual desire to go abroad, including education, career path, and social status.
