INTRODUCTION

Increasingly, it became clear that the deep foundations for high-rises, car parks, supermarkets etc were obliterating the delicate strata that existed below ground. This is especially important for people living in small communities, who might not have immediate support systems in place and who often end up feeling more isolated as a result.

Archaeology

What lessons can be applied from the York experience to other jurisdictions? It probably includes within its boundaries part of the Roman riverfront and its associated structures. Biological anthropologists examine biological changes in humans and non-human primate relatives.

Regional Research Frameworks

It has been estimated, however, that 75 per cent of the city's archaeological remains has already been destroyed Heighway, 1972: 5. During times of financial difficulties, like any art, it's usually at the forefront of public budget cuts despite the widespread perception of value to public interest and the potential to attract paying visitors to them as tourist attractions including the jobs that such a new site would create. In this concentration, you'll acquire ethical, practical and technical skills — and learn to view the world through a social, historical and evolutionary lens.

The dashboard above display figures depicting the raw reading taken by the pXRF device for specific elements, as well as the results of Principle Component Analysis used to identify elemental factors contributing to the pXRF results. This specific form of decoration appears from the Johnson site in Indiana County to the Foley Farm site in Greene County.

Work unfinished: Brading villa on the Isle of Wight

As Azkarate himself highlights in this volume, the future of archaeology as a discipline will depend on this.

The policy is, however, clearly written, and well formulated. First, do different chert types have different chemical signatures or fingerprints? Sometimes they'll include recommendations for other related newsletters or services we offer. Finally, planners must now evaluate archaeological considerations in larger economic terms.
