COVID

We must fight for a genuinely proletarian morality that treats all workers, male or female, black or white, as equals and brothers and sisters, united in the cause of the struggle against Capital. But fathers who are employed full time are somewhat more likely than other dads—and more likely than full-time working moms—to say they spend too little time with their kids. There were improvements in pre-school care for children: in 1960 there were 500,000 places, but by 1971 this had risen to over five million.

Review: [Untitled] on JSTOR

America is just too expensive to live in and the rich make damn sure the middle class keep working harder so they don't have to.

The Complete History of Working from Home

These moms take on more of the responsibility for parenting tasks and household chores than those who work full time.

How Working Parents Share Parenting and Household Responsibilities

If anything, it figures to be more dynamic than ever. Hochschild: I love attention to this, but we need to be precise about it.

In Defence of Marxism

Argentina has defaulted on its national debt several times, and inflation was running 600% while I was there. If people work in the informal sector, if they're day workers, if they're in factories that are still open and there's no paid sick leave, no income guarantee, then they have no choice.

Women's Unpaid and Underpaid Work in the Times of Covid

Oh, and I could fill a landfill with all of the Obama and Hillary propaganda that they were nice enough to send me. The situation is much different in households where the father works full time and the mother works part time. This can be seen as both a return to pre-industrial revolution work routines and an advancement towards the future of work.

Domestic worker

This is not a large number in the absolute, but significant when compared to the 3 to 5% overall shortfall in petroleum availability which brought on the recent gasoline lines. So, I stood up one day walked out. The fight for the interests of women must begin in the workplace.
