Kyoka Izumi

Between 1912 and 1915, Chen was a regular visitor. As Chen Yingning traveled and sojourned in Beijing, Shanghai, and other places between the 1890s and the 1940s, he and many of his colleagues became both witnesses to and participants in the renewed sectarian competition to shape the vision of the body and reformulate self-cultivation practice for the modern public.

Kyouka Izumi

Some people argued that Japan should develop economic and military forces, instead of insisting on justice and humanity, which they thought were airy-fairy.

CJKV

In this elitist and reformist vision of what constituted a modern religion, traditional Daoist self-cultivation techniques were perceived not only as means for attaining personal goals of health, longevity, and transcendence but also as vital instruments for preserving national culture and identity, and even strengthening the nation by perfecting the bodies and spirits of individual citizens.

Kyouka Izumi

As you and your companions pace the shore, you gaze at the great Southern Barbarian carrack which hoists its flags into the gilded mist.
