XX. Of Counsel. Francis Bacon. 1909

Nay, the majesty of kings is rather exalted than diminished when they are in the chair of counsel; neither was there ever prince bereaved of his dependences by his counsel; except where there hath been either an over-greatness in one counsellor or an over-strict combination in divers; which are things soon found and holpen. It is of singular use to princes if they take the opinions of their counsel both separately and together. June 9, 1691, and had, 15.

Base Fellows

Thus we find that, on a scrutiny, unparalleled for rigour and vindictiveness, with the exception of four doubtful cases not a single fee traced to Bacon himself could be called a bribe not one appeared to have been given on any promise, not one appeared to have been given in secret, not one appeared to have corrupted justice. They are said to have come over and settled in Duxbury, Mass.
