Pediatric Nursing (CPN/RN)

Evidence suggests that, given the choice, most parents prefer a pediatric nurse for their child, not a general practice nurse.

Homepage

Pediatric nursing specialties Under the umbrella of pediatrics you may find opportunities for even more specialized nursing work. Because their patients are so much younger, pediatric nurses often form strong relational-ties with them in different ways than they would with adult patients—by playing games with them, being goofy, or holding their hand during tough procedures.

Pediatric Nursing (CPN/RN)

In addition to being able to have the medical knowledge and skills necessary for the job, pediatric nurses must be adept at working with children, as well as their parents and families. Typical questions focus on topics such as disease management, injury treatment, infection control, safety, care management, and illness prevention and treatment.
