Cuban Missile Crisis

The next day, October 27, Khrushchev sent another message indicating that any proposed deal must include the removal of U. Nevertheless, during October 24 and 25, some ships turned back from the quarantine line; others were stopped by U. Journal of Cold War Studies.

To the Brink: JFK and the Cuban Missile Crisis

But the greatest danger of all would be to do nothing. During a tense, four-hour meeting, Mikoyan convinced Castro that despite Moscow's desire to help, it would be in breach of an unpublished Soviet law, which did not actually exist, to transfer the missiles permanently into Cuban hands and provide them with an independent nuclear deterrent.

Review of Herbert S. Dinerstein, [The Making of a Missile Crisis, October 1962] (Baltimore: The Johns Hopkins University Press, 1976).

That nobody in the government was certain of Khrushchev's response makes Kennedy's statement all the more remarkable.
