10. The Sigoti Teachers Group
A grassroots approach to educational theatre
by Donald Okola and Joyce Collie

The Sigoti Teachers' Group (STG) is a local theatre group situated in the upper Nyasachilima, Kasama District, Northern Malawi. A number of teachers from different schools see the benefit of drama in their teaching and decided to form a group to help them develop to an even more skills and work on more educational approaches involving drama.

Although it is called the "Sigoti Teachers' Group", it also has members from other fields of work. All members have one thing in common, the love for drama and the desire to acquire more skills in this area. They are mostly young people between 18 and 30 years old. Most of them have gone through teacher training colleges.

The STG's initial objectives were:

- to create an opportunity for teachers to acquire dramatic skills to make them better teachers;
- to provide an educational tool for teacher learning;
- to teach the required skills in teaching classes as well as drama clubs.

The most obvious reason for starting the STG initially was the fact that the members lived and worked in the Sigoti zone. In order to get any training or information on drama, they had to travel and had to go via Kasama, which is c. 2½ hours away. This was either impossible or very difficult. It was decided to form a group instead of having a local group. When we work in the community we stay in smaller groups and can therefore travel around and teach them. This can be incorporated in the theatre work we do as the STG and its members are not limited to one particular place. We can go to different areas and teach them how to best present drama and how to get students and the general public involved in creating theatre as
