

Chiefs of industry - Māori tribal enterprise in early colonial New Zealand

Auckland University Press - Maori and Business, Nelson Tasman and Marlborough

Description: -

- Philosophy, Japanese.
 Spanish drama -- Classical period, 1500-1700
 New Zealand -- History -- 1840-1876.
 New Zealand -- Commerce -- History -- 19th century.
 Tauhokohoko.
 Business enterprises -- New Zealand -- History -- 19th century.
 Flour industry -- New Zealand -- History -- 19th century.
 Shipping -- New Zealand -- History -- 19th century.
 Maori (New Zealand people) -- Economic conditions -- 19th century.
 Maori (New Zealand people) -- Commerce -- History -- 19th century.
 Chiefs of industry - Māori tribal enterprise in early colonial New Zealand
 -Chiefs of industry - Māori tribal enterprise in early colonial New Zealand
 Notes: Includes bibliographical references (p. 279-290) and index.
 This edition was published in 2006

Filesize: 62.28 MB

Tags: #Chiefs #of #industry; #Maori #tribal #enterprise #in #early #colonial #New #Zealand.

Chiefs of Industry: Māori Tribal Enterprise in Early Colonial New Zealand by Hazel Petrie

By wars end, and for decades afterwards, the government acquired huge estates of Māori land, leaving little arable land to many Māori. Celebrating 80 Years of Māori Farming, Huia Publishers, Wellington, 2013, pp. Currently a Post-Doctoral Fellow in the Mira Szaszy Research Centre for Maori and Pacific Economic Development at The University of Auckland, Dr Petrie's research interests include New Zealand and Pacific history, British history especially 19th century social history , Maori society, oral traditions and language.

Chiefs of industry; Maori tribal enterprise in early colonial New Zealand.

Please note imported items may take up to 24 hours to appear on your shelf. Hazel Petrie has an MA in history and PhD in Maori studies from the University of Auckland. It will be visible on your In Progress shelf to others and any content you have added to the title will be shared.

Chiefs of Industry, Hazel Petrie

Some crewed on European-owned ships, but most Māori were reluctant employees, preferring to maintain their traditional lifestyle and independence.

Chiefs of Industry: Maori Tribal Enterprise in Early Colonial New Zealand by Hazel Petrie

This will be visible to the community. Impacts of War Throughout New Zealand before the wars, then Māori did have some economic success. She has contributed chapters to numerous books on history, ecology and religion, and is the author of Chiefs of Industry: Maori Tribal Enterprise in Early Colonial New Zealand, which was shortlisted for the Montana New Zealand Book Awards in 2007.

Chiefs of industry; Maori tribal enterprise in early colonial New Zealand.

. In Waitara, in the 1850s, Te Ātiawa possessed 35 ploughs, 20 pairs of harrows, 40 carts, 300 cattle, 150 horses and a small flotilla of boats. Introducing the Pākehā Economy After the 1830s, Māori were compelled to adapt to Pākehā ways of food production and exchange, or sale.

Chiefs of Industry: Māori Tribal Enterprise in Early Colonial New Zealand by Hazel Petrie

Neither the item nor any content you added to it will be visible to others. The ultimate failure of their businesses in the eighteen sixties had more to do with changing technology and the lack of enough manpower to compete with the influx of colonists than with the Maori themselves.

Related Books

- Timbers of Guadeloupe
- Hugh McCulloch - father of modern banking
- Handbook of diction for singers - Italian, German, French
- Shogomac Sam
- Rethinking scientific change and theory - stabilities, ruptures, incommensurabilities?