However, it is worth noting that the Medal Index Cards were scanned onto microfiche by the National Archives some years ago in black and white and only the front of each card was scanned.

Using the London Gazette to Research a WW1 Soldier

It should, therefore, be possible to trace details for an individual who served in the First World War from the surviving medal records. However, even searching a combination will sometimes bring no results. The listings, not being obligatory, are not so complete as those of bankrupts. The London Gazette was first published as The Oxford Gazette on 7 November 1665.

British Army WW1 Medal Records 1914

Those mentioned in dispatches are also listed, and from 1843 these include other ranks.

Using the London Gazette to Research a WW1 Soldier

Though, not all foreign awards or mentioned in despatches were gazetted. This would have been a tragedy; although most of the cards had been copied previously this was only performed in low quality black and white and only the fronts of each card had been scanned. This was done to create a record of every person's collective entitlement to campaign medals and gallantry medals.
