I suspect the Premier was not even aware that there were other workers involved. I submit that, on the point in issue, the Chicago River case is indistinguishable from this one, and that, if the Norris-LaGuardia Act did not prohibit a federal court from issuing an injunction in that case, it does not do so in this one. They showed us they did not want it when they set their first strike date.

If that is what Julian Porter needs, we will do it. The father or at least his estate did gain by the improvements, and it is not unreasonable to assume that the father wanted the son present so that he could work the plantation.
