Laws of Nature

This strikes us as odd, as it does not correspond to our everyday practice.

When Necessitarians say of a claim— e. Parker, New York: McGraw-Hill Book Co.

The Theory of Abstract Objects

For example, a factory consists of machines, conveyor belts, and so forth; machines are made of various interacting cogs, levers, and wires which, if left to themselves, cannot fulfill the functions they fulfill within the machine ; the cogs are made out of molecules, the molecules are made of atoms, and the atoms are made of protons, neutrons, electrons, and so on. Indeed, it is arguable that for every emotion we hold, the Universe has its counterpart.

Natural Properties (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

Hawley 2010 defends the possibility of there being multiple composition relations.

Natural Properties (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

Thirdly, the ensuing realization relationships between higher-level and function-playing properties can only be defined by appealing to properties see entry on.
