Now, they probably always used recordings for this job, but the idea here is that there is a woman sitting there doing it, and she is called the speaking clock.

Albert's Bridge & Other Plays by Tom Stoppard

The way we see the world depends upon the way we look at it; reality is relative. The key for dealing with these apparently irreconcilable opposites is the concept of perspective. It is cute, but not too exciting.

Albert Dormer

Still, it shows what he can do, and why his stuff is often lively and entertaining. Dormer was the correspondent at world bridge championships during the 1970s and 1980s, and bridge correspondent of The Times for four years from 1990.
