The original art that they created during this period, used the same media as those of the secular and pagan artists of the cultures in which they lived, including frescoes, mosaics, and sculpture in Romantic classical styles, changing the meanings of motifs and pagan symbolism, such as grapevines, peacocks, and shepherds. According to the latter, in the middle of the third century the churches of Caesarea of Palestine were burned by the pagans. Doubtless the first churches in the real sense of the term were constructed under the reign of 222 —235 ; at least, according to Origen, his successor Maximinus had them burned.
