Chapter Thirteen

With wonderful ardour they travelled long distances to address cottage- meetings, helped to educate the ignorant on the Sabbath Day, and by their personal example of religious piety and zeal, exercised strong influence upon all around. Many Labour activists were friendly to the socialist world. Organised Science Schools established in Bristol and Birmingham.

Records held for Doncaster (South Yorkshire)

The making of new regulations was usually accompanied by an approved code and, in addition, a guidance note. The making of welfare orders continued after the Great War ended and by 1932 twenty four were on the statute book. Institution of Civil Engineers inquired into the education and status of civil engineers in UK and foreign — very critical of the situation in the UK.

A Short History of Technical Education

Over the following decades this technical, scientific and medical body of resource would be increased whenever budgets allowed, enriching the Inspectorate with specialised experience of every industrial sector and strengthening its credibility and authority. No government until 1979 deviated from the principle that it was their job, in part, to regulate the general drift of wages in society. In 2014 a new inquest was opened into that disaster.

Chapter Thirteen

Eight thousand workers in Derby and the surrounding area were laid off without wages. ~It is interesting to know that one old lady in Honley, aged 86 at the time of writing this history, attended Hall Ing Sunday School as a scholar as early as 1838. A perhaps forgotten example was the Joint Advisory Committee on Accident Prevention, whose notable 1956 report charted a path that would lead to the Factory Inspectorate establishing an Accident Prevention Advisory Unit APAU.

CASCAT: Record

Its interior, however, has had to pass through many ordeals in the shape of supposed improvements since that date. Labour did well in High Peak, but not nearly well enough to win. Outside of London , the industry was organised under two national joint councils, one for the municipally owned companies and tramway sector and another for the private companies.

Chapter Thirteen

Education Department established ED for Scotland. Cyril Bradley, the TGWU official, was a supporter of the productivity movement, but even he complained at the DTC about the way in which the appointment of the chairman of the local committee had been made, which effectively left the unions out of the decision.
