Reading Ilyenkov — Texts

Alex Levant is an academic mercenary who sells his lecturing skills to various departments in the social sciences and humanities, including Political Science at York University and Communication Studies and Global Studies at Wilfrid Laurier University, Canada. Following Marx and Engels, he believed that the world takes on the character of an object with significance only in the course of its transformation through human activity. He gives an outstandingly clear, vivid, and compelling account of Ilyenkov's ideas, and defends them persuasively against criticism.

In that spirit he joined battle with the dogmatic materialists of the Soviet academy and the crude positivists who dominated science and social science.
